AN ORGANIZATION IN DESPAIR

Commencing this Sunday the American Zionist organization will hold its annual convention in the city of Detroit.

Very little is expected of this coming conference. The organization has been in the throes of a process of disintegration for some time, and it is now perhaps in a sicker state than it has been in since the early days of the war. Three years ago it was flushed with success, having reached the summit of achievement, and its attitude towards its environment was one of defiant independence. Since then it has been steadily declining. To-day it is but a shadow of its former self, and its movements are listless and perfunctory.

Three years ago the American Zionist Organization, glorying in its well being, had unknowingly reached a crisis. Signs were not wanting that a change was imminent. The challenge flung by the Buffalo Convention at the J. D. C., and the non-Zionist forces was bound to react unfavorably. The necessity was staring it in the face of reorganizing and acquiring new strength if it was to hold its own. The alternative was retrogression. The leaders were overcome with a sense of their own greatness, following the apparent success of their divers manipulations, and refused to give the new elements that were clamoring for admittance an opportunity to get inside their circle. In the offing there was the appearance of the dust of the expected march of the hosts of the Agency coming to their assistance. The illusory dust blinded their eyes and they spurned the hand that was offered them. Ever since then the heads of American Zionism have had their eyes fixed on the horizon looking at the appearance of dust; the while neglecting the realities around them, allowing their organization to grow weaker and weaker.

Well—the Zionist Organization is now convening in Detroit in a sadly demoralized state. The Agency is still a hope, a pious wish. The speeches of Marshall and Felix Warburg are inspiring. They help to flutter up the drooping spirit. But they are only strings of words; coagulations of breath.

The Keren Hayesod cannot maintain its budget with the currency of verbiage. The Zionist organization cannot subsist on a diet of intentions. It has lost itself in the fascinating maze of reveries. At the convention it will have no record of achievement to report. It will have no plans to offer for the future. It has no leadership, no program; no initiative; no energy. All that is left for it is to select an eminence, as did Moses of old, and go and lie down there to join its fathers.

Last year before the convention there was some ado caused by the appearance of a group of able and willing men who formed themselves into an opposition to fight the inept leadership and supplant it. The opposition was outmanoeuvred by the astute politicians of the administration. Levy won his memorable "victory". The opposition was "crushed and routed." Now there is not a breeze to ruffle the calm surface of the administration pool. But the calm is one of stagnation, of utter lifelessness.

We are decidedly pessimistic about the future of Zionism in America. Blind leadership staked the very life of the movement in the gamble for the Agency. The Organization is nearly dead. The Agency has not yet been born.

THE CHURCH, THE SYNAGOGUE AND THE FUTURE OF CANADA

Delivered by Rabbi F. M. Isserman at Carlton Street United Church Sunday evening, June 16th., at a Farewell Service arranged in his honor

The church and the synagogue have for centuries been regarded as foes and competitors, hostile rivals, representatives of warring conceptions of life and of duty, of man and of God. Their followers have interpreted their religious loyalties to mean hatred and aversion for those who shared not their belief. Discrimination and abuse, persecution and exile, torture and martyrdom, though admittedly evil, were not regarded as evil where applied to the minority religious group. With the result that the music of Jewish history in Europe has been written in the minor key, and the record of the Jew's sojourn there is a series of tragedies and massacres. With the further results that the relationships between Jews and Christians for some centuries were with few exceptions marked by covert suspicion and outward hatred. Intelligent and kindly men whose minds were blinded by prejudice glibly swallowed the most grotesque tales, the most absurd myths. The Jews were seen on the one hand as the world's domineering capitalists, and on the other hand as the relentless foes of the capitalistic structure. They were called the Satans who plot the wars of the world; and the cowards who dread the thought of war. They were hailed as a people of super-intelligence, and at the same time the members of the inferior Semitic race. Thus went the tale. The Jew, on the other hand, saw in the Christian the fiend who destroyed his home, massacred his children and caused his aches and sufferings. So blinded was the Jew by his miserable lot, that he attributed his sufferings not merely to his living Christian persecutors but also to that Galilean Jew of the first century in whose name his punishment was decreed, so that the name of Jesus became anathema on the lips of his people.

But these are the nightmares of the past. We are living in a new age, when a new spirit is asserting itself, when mankind has awakened from the stupor which has blinded it. With the clearer vision that has become ours, we perceive that we cannot love God and hate any of His children; that the primary loyalty in religion is not to the partisan claims of an institution, but to the claims of universal fellowship and brotherhood.

Under the influence of this new spirit, we have seen some startling happenings in Toronto in the past few years. We have seen Catholics, Protestants and Jews sup together in a synagogue. We have seen a rabbi frequently preaching in the churches of the city, we have seen ministers occupying the pulpit of a synagogue—sharing even in the important anniversary of a synagogue. We no longer regard the church and synagogue as rivals and competitors. We see them as friends and coworkers. Their ultimate aims and goals are identical, the regeneration of mankind and the attainment of the kingdom of God. Their moral messages are similar, though their theologies vary. And why should it be otherwise? Did not Judaism and Christianity spring out of the same soil? Is not Christianity the daughter of Judaism, conceived in her womb and nourished at her breasts? Are not Jewish biblical heroes also Christian heroes? Were not the dreams of a nobler Society phrased by Jewish

COUNCIL CAMP FOR GIRLS OPENS

The first group of 30 campers for the Council Camp for Girls operated by the Council of Jewish Women will leave the city June 28. This will form the first of the five groups which will receive a two weeks' vacation at Council Camp making a total of 150 girls. Last summer 84 girls were accommodated. New quarters are at Lake Fournelle four miles from Shawbridge Station and on the main road to L'Achigan. A new bungalow overlooking Lake Fournelle forms the nucleus of the camp. A screened porch will provide sleeping quarters and a large sunny field will be the space for athletics and dancing. Tents will house the nurses' quarters and arts and crafts department. Activities include swimming, arts and crafts, athletics, dancing, dramatics and singing. The personnel of the Camp is, director, Mrs Samuel Colle; swimming, Miss R. Winter, Dancing and dramatics, Miss Becky Cohen; Arts and Crafts, Miss H. Sultzman; athletics, Miss P. Salsberg; nurse, Miss J. Elbaum. Dr. Felix Bernstein, last year's doctor, will again serve and will examine the children before leaving the city. The Provincial Transport Company will supply buses gratis to transport the five groups of campers from the Baron de Hirsch Institute to Mile End Station. Friends welcome during the season.

Marriages

Feldman-Cohen

The marriage of Freda, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Cohen, to Charles E. Feldman, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Feldman, of Ozone Park, Long Island, N.Y., was solemnized Sunday, June 23rd., at Kupchick's Restaurant. Rabbi Berger officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her gown was of ivory bridal satin and lace. The full skirt touching her slipper heels, was a little shorter in front, with orange blossoms. Her veil of rose point lace arranged in cap effect formed a pointed edge, with orange blossoms on either side, and tiny wreath at the back. The bridal shower bouquet was of lilies, and lilies-of-the-valley. Miss Anna Feldman, sister of the groom, was maid of honour. Wearing nile green taffeta, she carried a bouquet of roses and sweet peas. Jack Cohen, brother of the bride, was best man. The bridesmaids were Misses Lila Cohen, sister of the bride, in maize georgette, with handmade flowers; Fay Mazur, rose taffeta and tulle shoulder wreath of French flowers; Bea Cooperman, pink satin and tulle with French flowers. Their bouquets were of roses and sweet peas. Morrie Hislop, Eddie Waldman, and Moe Villner, were groomsmen. Misses Anna Feldman, of Boston, Mass., and Fanny Weinstein, Long Island, N.Y., as flower girls carried baskets of rose petals and sweet peas. Mrs J. Cohen, mother of the bride, wore a black lace gown; Mrs. J. Feldman, mother of the groom, gold lace gown, both with corsages of red roses. The out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. J. Feldman, Misses Anna and Rose Feldman, and Issie Feldman, Ozone Park, Myer and Charlie Cohen, New York City; Mr. and Mrs. I. Cohen, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Mr. J. Solomon, Mrs. A. A Novel by Abraham Cahan

And so, feeling like a school-boy in Antomir when he is made to furnish the very rod with which he is to be chastise, I went to the headquarters of the union, paid my initiation fee, and became a member. It was on a Friday afternoon. The secretaries of the organization were seated at a long table in the basement of a meeting-room building on Rivington Street. The basement and the street outside were swarming with cloak-makers. A number of mass meetings had been arranged to take place in several halls, with well-known Socialists for speakers, but I had not even the curiosity to attend them. When some of my shopmates reproached me for my indifference I said, sullenly:

"I've joined the union. What more do you want?"

One of them, a Talmudist like myself, spoke of capital and labor, of the injustice of the existing economic order. He had recently, through the strike, been converted to Socialism. He made a fiery appeal to me. He spoke with the exaltation of a new proselyte. But his words fell on deaf ears. I had no mind for anything but my college studies.

"Do you think it right that millions of people should toil and live in misery so that a number of idlers might roll in luxury?" he pleaded.

"I haven't made the world, nor can I mend it," was my retort.

The manufacturers yielded almost every point. The "season" began with a rush.

My pay-envelope for the first week contained thirty-two dollars and some cents. I knew the union price, of course, and I had figured out the sum before I received it, yet when I beheld the two figures on the envelope the blood surged to my head. Thirty-two dollars! Why, that meant sixty-four rubles! I was tempted to write Naphtali about it.

The next week brought me an even fatter envelope. I worked sixteen hours a day. Reading and studying had to be suspended till October. I lived on five dollars a week. My savings, and with them my sense of my own importance in the world, grew apace. As there was no time to go to the savings bank, I had to carry what I deemed a great sum on my person (in a money-belt that I had improvised for the purpose). This was a constant source of anxiety as well as of joy. No matter how absorbed I might have been in my work or in thought, the consciousness of having that wad of paper money with me was never wholly absent from my mind. It loomed as a badge of omnipotence. I felt in the presence of Luck, which was a living spirit, a goddess. I was mostly grave. The frivolities of the other men in the factory seemed so fatuous, so revolting. A great sense of security and self-confidence swelled my heart. When I walked through the American streets I would feel at home in them, far more so than I had ever felt before. At the same time danger was constantly hovering about me—the danger of the street crowds seizing that magic wad from me.

The image of the college building loomed as a bride-elect of mine. But that, somehow, did not seem to have anything to do with my money-belt, as though I expected to go to college without encroaching upon my savings—a case of eating the cake and having it.

The cloak-makers were so busy they had no time to attend meetings, and being little accustomed to method and discipline, they suffered their organization to melt away. By the time the "season" came to a close the union was scarcely stronger than it had been before the strike. As there was no work now, and no prices to fix, one did not miss its protection.

The number of men employed in the trade in those years did not exceed seven thousand. The industry was still in its infancy.

I resumed my studies with a passion amounting to a frenzy. I would lay in a supply of coarse rye bread, cheese, and salmon to last me two or even three days, and never leave my lair during that length of time. I dined at the Delancey Street restaurant every third or fourth day, and did not go to the theater unless Jake was particularly insistent. But then I religiously attended Felix Adler's ethical-culture lectures, at Chickering Hall, on Sunday mornings. I valued them for their English rather than for anything else, but their spirit, reinforced by the effect of organ music and the general atmosphere of the place, would send my soul soaring. These gatherings and my prospective alma mater appealed to me as being of the same order of things, of the same world of refined ways, new thoughts, noble interests.

If I came across a street faker and he spoke with a foreign accent I would pass on; if, however, his English struck me as that of a "real American," I would pause and listen to his "lecture," sometimes for more than an hour. People who were born to speak English were superior beings. Even among fallen women I would seek those who were real Americans.

CHAPTER VIII

I was reading Pendennis. The prospect of returning to work was a hideous vision. The high wages in store for me had lost their magnetism. I often wondered whether I might not be able to secure some pupils in English or Hebrew, and drop cloak-making at once. I dreamed of enlisting the interest of a certain Maecenas, a German-American Jew who financed many a struggling college student of the Ghetto. Thoughts of a "college match" would flash through my mind—that is, of becoming engaged to some girl who earned good wages and was willing to support me through college. This form of matrimonial arrangement which has been mentioned in an earlier chapter is not uncommon among our immigrants. Alliances of this sort naturally tend to widen the intellectual chasm between the two parties to the contract, often result in some of the tragedies or comedies that fill the swiftflowing life of American Ghettos. But the ambition to be the wife of a doctor, lawyer, or dentist is too strong in some of our working-girls to be quenched by the dangers involved.

One of the young women I had in mind was Gussie, the cloak-finisher mentioned above, who saved for a dowry portion too energetically to make a marriage. She was a good girl, not a fool, either, and I thought to myself that she would make me a good wife even if she was plain and had a wasted appearance and was none too young. I was too passionately infatuated with my prospective alma mater to ponder whether I could love my fiancée or not.

"I have a fellow for you," I said to Gussie, under the guise of playfulness, meeting her in the street one day. "Something fine."

"Who is it — yourself?" she asked quickly.

"You have guessed it right."

ACCIDENTAL DEATH

A confirmation by several witnesses that the driver did all in his power to avoid an accident, resulted in a jury in Coroner's Court Tuesday morning rendering a verdict of accidental death in the case of Max Silver, 5279 Esplanade avenue, who died at the Royal Victoria Hospital Monday night from a fractured skull sustained in an automobile accident near his home.

Playing games with other boys on the sidewalk on Esplanade avenue, near Fairmount avenue Saturday afternoon, the child suddenly ran across the street in front of an automobile. He succeeded in getting by the vehicle but was knocked down by a second auto travelling in the opposite direction. The driver of the machine saw the boy and swerved to one side of the pavement, but was unable to avoid the accident.

"Have I? Then tell your fellow to go to all the black devils."

"Why?"

"Because."

"If I could go to college—"

"You want me to pay your bills, do you?"

"Wouldn't you like to be the wife of a doctor? You would take rides in my carriage—"

"You mean the other way around: you would ride in my carriage and I should have to start a breach-of-promise case against 'Dr. Levinsky.' You'll have to look for a bigger fool than I," she concluded, with a smile.

It was an attractive smile, full of good nature and common sense. A smile of this kind often makes a homely face pretty. Gussie's did not. The light it shed only served to publish her ugliness. But I did not care. The infatuation I had brought with me from Antomir had not yet completely faded out, anyhow. And so I harboured vague thoughts that some day, when I saw fit to press my suit, Gussie might yield.

I was getting impatient. The idea of having to go back to work became more hateful to me every day. I was in despair. Finally I decided to consider my career as a cloak-maker closed; to cut my expenses to the veriest minimum, to live on my savings, look for some source of income that would not interfere with my studies, take the college examination as soon as I was ready for it, and let the future take care of itself.

In the heart of the Jewish neighborhood I found an attic for half of what I was paying the Irish family. Moreover, it was, a neighborhood where everything was cheaper than in any other part of New York, the only one in which it was possible for a man to have a "room" to himself and live on four dollars a week. So I moved to that attic, a step for which, as I now think of it, I cannot but be thankful to fate, for it brought me in touch with a quaint, simple man who is my warm friend to this day, perhaps the dearest friend I have had in America.

The house was a rickety, two-story frame structure, the smallest and oldest-looking on the block. Its ground floor was used as a tailoring shop by the landlord himself, a white-headed giant of a man whom I cannot recall otherwise than as smiling wistfully and sighing. His name was Esrah Nodelman. His wife, who was a dwarf beside him, ruled him with an iron hand.

Mrs. Nodelman gave me breakfasts, and I soon felt like one of the family. She was a veritable chatterbox, her great topic of conversation being her son Meyer, upon whom she doted, and his American-born wife, whose name she scarcely ever uttered without a malediction. She told me how she, Meyer's mother, her sister, and a niece had turned out their pockets and pawned their jewelry to help Meyer start in business as a clothing-manufacturer.

"He's now worth a hundred thousand dollars—may no evil eye hit him," she said. "He's a good fellow, a lump of gold. If God had given him a better wife (may the plague carry off the one he has) he would be all right. She has a meat-ball for a face, the face of a murderess. She always was a murderess, but since Meyer became a manufacturer there is no talking to her at all. The airs she is giving herself! And all because she was born in America, the frog that she is."

I soon made Meyer's acquaintance. He was a dark man of forty, with Oriental sadness in his eyes. To lend his face capitalistic dignity he had recently grown a pair of sidewhiskers, but one day, a week or two after I met him, he saw a circus poster of "Jo Jo, the human dog," and then he hastened to discard them.

"I don't want to look like a man-dog," he explained, gaily, to his mother, who was unpleasantly surprised by the change.

"Man-dog nothing," she protested, addressing herself to me. "He was as handsome as gold in those whiskers. He looked like a regular monarch in them." And then to him: "I suppose it was that treasure of a wife you have who told you to have them taken off. It's a lucky thing she does not order you to have your foolish head taken off."

"You better shut up, mamma," he said, sternly. And she did.

He called to see his parents quite frequently, sometimes with some of his children, but never with his wife, at least not while I lived there.

Crassly illiterate save for his ability to read some Hebrew, without knowing the meaning of the words, he enjoyed a considerable degree of native intellectual alertness, and in his crude, untutored way was a thinker.

One evening he took to quizzing me on my plans, partly in Yiddish and partly in broken English, which he uttered with a strong Cockney accent, a relic of the several years he had spent in London.

"And what will you do after you finish (he pronounced it "flendish") college?" he inquired, with a touch of derision.

"I shall take up some higher things," I rejoined, reluctantly.

"And what do you call 'higher things'?" he pursued in his quizzical, browbeating way. "Are you going to be a philosopher?"

"Yes, I shall be a doctor of philosophy," I answered, frostily.

"What's that? You want to be both a doctor and a philosopher? But you know the saying, 'Many trades—few blessings.'"

"I am not going to be a doctor and a philosopher, but a doctor of philosophy," I said, with a sneer.

"And how much will you make?"

"Oh, let him alone, Meyer," his mother intervened. "He is an educated fellow, and he doesn't care for money at all."

"Doesn't care for money, eh?" the younger Nodelman jeered.

Montreal Marriages

Lecker—Aronson

The marriage of Ethel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Aronson, to Manuel Lecker, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. Lecker, was solemnized Sunday, June 23, in the Blue and Oak Rooms of the Windsor Hotel. Rabbi Bender of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, officiated. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore ivory bridal satin with a train falling from the hips. Her veil of net was fashioned with a cap of lace and knots of orange blossoms, and her bouquet was of orchids, tea roses and lilies-of-the-valley in shower. The matron of honour and bridesmaids, gowned alike in flowered chiffon fashioned with long tight bodices and bertha collars, and full skirts cut in points, were: Mrs. M. H. Dover, in pale pink; and Misses Rae Aronson, orchid; Rose Aronson, orchid and pale blue; Mary Lecker, yellow and Jennie Lecker, green. Their hats and slippers matched their gowns and they carried bouquets of sweet peas in pastel shades. Myer Burman was best man. Ushers were, Randolph Aronson, Eddie Aronson, Jack Schleifer and Cyril Aronson. Mrs. Aronson, mother of the bride, wore a black beaded georgette gown, with hat and shoes to match. Mrs. Lecker, mother of the groom, was gowned in silver grey georgette and lace with hat and shoes to match. Their corsages were of American Beauties. A reception was held for 150 guests. Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Lecker are spending their honeymoon in New York, Atlantic City and Washington. Going away the bride wore a fawn travelling suit, with hat, shoes and bag matching.

Atcovitch-Silvensky

The marriage of Bella, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Silvensky, to Saul Michael Atcovitch, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Atcovitch, was solemnized Sunday, June 16, at the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, Rabbi Bender officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Over her gown of white moiré fell her veil of net fashioned with a cap of lace and orange blossoms. Her flowers were orchelia roses. Miss Gertrude Silvensky, sister of the bride, was her only attendant, wearing a gown of blue georgette with hat to match, and carrying pink roses. Joe Leibovitch, of Quebec, was best man. Mrs. Silvensky, mother of the bride, and Mrs. Atcovitch, mother of the groom, both in black lace, also wore hats and corsages of red roses. From out-of-town were Mrs. H. Suderman, M. Suderman, and Miss Chye Suderman, all of Kingston, and Miss Anna Leibovitch, of Quebec. Mr. and Mrs. Atcovitch are spending their honeymoon in New York and will live at Bernard Avenue West.

Helfield-Grossner

The marriage of Anne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Grossner, to Max H. Helfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Helfield, was solemnized Sunday, June 23, at Bnai Jacob Synagogue. Rabbi Katzman officiated. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her white satin gown was trimmed with a spray of lilies-of-the-valley on the shoulder and the skirt of frills fashioned longer in the back was caught with a rhinestone buckle. Her veil of net edged with lace was held by a lace cap and orange blossoms on either side and she carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Miss Rae Helfield, sister of the groom, was maid of honour wearing a period gown of white satin and lace and a white mohair hat. She carried Columbia roses. Moe Helfield, brother of the groom, was best man. The bridesmaids were, Misses Sylvia Helfield in an orchid taffeta and chiffon bouffant gown; Florence Grossman, maize taffeta period gown; Sarah Grossner, pale blue taffeta, bouffant style; Sophie Saifer, green taffeta, bouffant and Mollie Nadler, white taffeta and chiffon, bouffant. They carried bouquets of roses and carnations and wore tulle bandeaux on their hair. The groomsmen were, Dick, Barney and Gordon Helfield, Louis Grossner and Joe Roelaff. Thelma Kugelmass as flower girl wore a frilled frock of pink crepe de chine and carried a basket of flowers. Mrs. Grossner, mother of the bride, was gowned in black satin and lace and Mrs. Helfield, mother of the groom wore black lace. Both corsages were of red roses. A reception was held for 300 guests. Mrs. M. Kovshansky, of Buffalo, was there. Mr. and Mrs. Max Helfield will spend their honeymoon at Old Orchard Beach and New York. Going away the bride wore a flowered ensemble with black chiffon coat and a white hat, shoes and bag to match. They will live at the Winton Apartments, 240 Kingston Avenue, Apartment 11.

Pinsky-Kerner

The marriage of Minnie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moe Kerner, to David Pinsky, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Pinsky, was solemnized Thursday, June 20 at Bnai Jacob Synagogue at 7.30 p.m. Rabbi Katzman performed the ceremony. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her model dress was of white bridal satin fashioned in straight lines.

Malomet-Dorfman

The marriage of Anna, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. Dorfman, to Nathan Malomet, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Malomet, was solemnized Tuesday, June 18, at Victoria Hall, Westmount, Rabbi H. Abramowitz officiated. Miss Gilda Silverman, of Los Angeles, sang "Oh Promise Me." The bride was given in marriage by her father. Over her gown of white satin with a long train and a satin frill around the waist, fell her veil of net caught with a cap of orange blossoms coming to a point on the forehead. She carried a bouquet of calla lilies. Miss Sarah Dorfman, attended her sister as maid of honour. Her gown was of pink moiré and she wore a straw hat and carried Columbia roses. John Rubin was best man. The bridesmaids, who were old fashioned dresses of organdy in pastel shades and carried bouquets of red roses, were Misses Mary Reider, Esther Dorfman, Nellie Shafer, Isabel Eisenberg, Dina Rubin, Annie Lifshitz, Cecile Greenblatt and Rose Rosen. Mrs. Dorfman mother of the bride, wore flowered chiffon and Mrs. Malomet, mother of the groom was gowned in black lace trimmed with velvet. Both corsages were of American Beauties. A dinner was held for 100 guests. Among them Mrs. R. Silverman, grandmother of the bride, Miss Gilda Silverman, Max Rosenblatt, Bob Silverman, Misses Anna Silverman, Grace Silverman, Norman Silverman, and Albert Silverman, all of Los Angeles; and Mrs. C. Triber, of South Carolina. Mr. and Mrs. Malomet have motored to Niagara Falls and other points, and will live at 1380 Bernard Avenue, Apartment 11.

Goffman-Shulman

The marriage of Ruth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. Shulman, to Joseph Goffman, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Goffman, was solemnized Wednesday, June 19, at Victoria Hall, Westmount. Rabbi H. Abramowitz officiated. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a white satin and lace bouffant gown. Her veil of net was draped with a cap of lace and clusters of orange blossoms on either side and she carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and lilies-of-the-valley. Mrs. I. Rubinstein, sister of the bride, as matron-of-honour, wore a blue moiré gown trimmed with silver and carried a bouquet of roses and baby's breath. N. Shulman was best man. The bridesmaids were Misses Lily Goffman, in peach taffeta; Molly Goffman, green taffeta; Emma Freedman, white and rose taffeta; Sally Freedman, green taffeta and tulle; Gertie Brown, pink taffeta and Freda Glassberg, white taffeta and tulle. They wore hats to match and carried bouquets of sweet peas and baby's breath. Mrs. H. Levitea, sister of the bride, wore a cream lace gown and a corsage of roses. Mrs. Shulman, mother of the bride, and Mrs. Goffman, mother of the groom, were in black lace with hats to match and corsages of American Beauties. A reception was held for 250 guests. Table decorations were carried out with pink flowers and candles. Mr. and Mrs. L. Tabachnick, of New York, were there. Mr. and Mrs. Goffman are spending their honeymoon in New York and Atlantic City. Travelling the bride wore a blue silk ensemble with hat to match.

GILLMAN-BLUMENTHAL

The marriage of Anna Blumenthal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. I. Austrager, to Joseph Gillman, son of Mr. and Mrs. I. Gillman, was solemnized Tuesday, June 25, at Bnai Synagogue with Rabbi Kaufman officiating. The bride was given in marriage by B. Baker. Over her bouffant gown of white satin and lace, her veil of net and lace was arranged and fell from a lace cap in Dutch effect and she carried roses, lilies and orange blossoms. Miss Leah Gaisin, the maid of honour, wore a bouffant gown of yellow taffeta and tulle with hat to match. Saul Gillman was best man. The bridesmaids were Misses Florence Garmaise, wearing mauve chiffon made with a tight bodice and handkerchief skirt; Sara Tucker, mauve moiré and tulle, and Hilda Tucker, bouffant gown of yellow moiré and tulle. They wore hats to match and carried bouquets the same shade. The groomsmen were Charles Gillman, Ralph Baker and Cecil Hill. The flower girls were Tootsie Gillman, in green organdie, and Rhoda Goldberg in blue organdie. Their hats matched and they carried baskets of rose petals. Seymour Glickman was page boy. Mrs. Austrager, mother of the bride, wore a fawn crepe romaine gown with hat to match and corsage of red roses and Mrs. Gillman, mother of the groom, was in black flat crepe with hat to match and corsage of red roses. Among 300 guests received were Mrs. J. Schachter, of Saskatchewan; Mr. and Mrs. S. Cohen, of Jacksonville, and Miss R. Ritterspora of Toronto.

The New Balfour building is a splendid example of the part electricity is playing both for power and lighting purposes in the modern office and factory buildings. Bloomfield and Talerman are the contractors who are responsible for the splendid achievement attained in this case. The entire work including; The high tension work, pumps, pipe work for the Bell Telephone Co., lighting system and transformer room were completed by this firm. This contract which covers all details in the electrical work in this large building constitutes and enviable record in the electrical contracting field. The transformer room which was designed by the above firm is modern in every detail. Bloomfield & Talerman, 13 Villeneuve East.

The Lavigne Window Shade, 1161 Bleury Street, has supplied all shades, curtains and draperies for the Y.M.H.A. Building. In the women's lounge rooms, the curtains are of a lovely gold repp that has in it colorings of green, henna and orange. In the library and men's lounge rooms a dark mulberry repp with designs of gold was used. The auditorium, which is particularly beautiful, has mulberry velour for the stage curtain and the lambrequin. The stiff valance is trimmed with looped cords and tassels of mulberry and gold, the whole giving a very beautiful effect. In the class rooms and meeting rooms casement drawn curtains in cream with gold and mulberry braid and tassels were used. These windows are very similar to those in the main dining room of the Windsor Hotel.

The John Inglis Co. Limited of Toronto and Montreal are pioneers in the manufacture of boilers, engines and special machinery. They have been in the business for over sixty years, making installations in a great many important Canadian buildings.

It has been thought that imported boilers are needed for the large jobs, but the quality and endurance of the Inglis product, as demonstrated where they have been installed, is decreasing outside competition.

Inglis boilers are made by Canadian labor, backed by Canadian capital. Their long experience in the field has enabled them to turn out a product equal, if not superior, to the best that can be imported.

FLOORS

"There are floors, and there are floors."

At last the floor has come into its own as a real style element in room decoration. Today every home, pretentious or modest, may boast a floor that contributes every quality the foundation of a room should have: 'beauty' that attracts the eye at once, 'style' that suggests the fine design floors of the old world, or the rugged hewn floors of our own Colonial period; 'permanence' that gives lasting satisfaction, and adds far beyond the cost to the value of the home.

There are two types of floors which formerly were limited to more pretentious homes and buildings, but are now available to all, at a cost within reach of any flooring budget. Each of these serves a distinct decorative purpose. One is the design oak floor, laid in squares, reminiscent of the days of the grand monarchs of France; the other, solid planks of oak, a type which, has its historic counterpart in all countries where before the era of machinery, flooring was cut roughly out of the log. We find in this country examples of such flooring in the old Colonial mansions which still survive, expressing the rugged simplicity and vigor of those early days.

The type of home, and the decorative handling of the interior will suggest which of the two styles is more appropriate, but in either case style is introduced into the floor, added to the comfort and lifelong service which oak provides above all other flooring materials.

There is a type of floor blocks, fashioned from Oak, which may be laid directly over cement floors and is particularly well adapted for churches, schools, libraries, gymnasiums, etc. This floor is laid entirely without the use of nails, and is laid in a plastic cement. Such a floor is solid, durable always level, free from squeaks, and has a solid, firm "feel" beneath the foot. Oak is preeminent for comfort and beauty, combined with permanence and lasting satisfaction.

Wide boards of solid oak are characteristic of Renaissance Italy, France and Spain, Elizabethan England and Colonial America, and in most cases were laid in what is known as the random-width style. Such a floor has an "accidental" air combined with dignity quite in keeping with the cozy and homelike atmosphere sought today in certain types of interiors.

It is not necessary to build to enjoy the advantages of these Oak Floors. In remodeling the old home, the floor is most important in creating the impression of newness. Montreal Wood Parquetry Floor Company are Master Floor Contractors, in the Art and will cheerfully furnish you with any floor information whether it is on the problem of new floors for the new home, or new floors in the remodeling of the old home.

Montreal Wood Parquetry Floor Company will lay a floor over your existing old worn floor, which serves as a sub-floor, at a very moderate figure. It is true economy, for on s laid, the oak floor is permanent, and enhances the value of a home out of all proportion to the cost.

The satisfaction to the home owner that always results from an expression of good taste and individuality cannot be measured in dollars.

STYLE is the governing factor for beauty of interiors. Coupled with utility, it makes a "house" a home, and this is possible at a very moderate cost.

OAK is Nature's masterpiece. Years of growth are necessary to produce the indescribable beauty of grain displayed in every strip, blank or block. Every part of the surface of an oak floor tells its story to the appreciative eye, which never tires of the enduring picture that Nature has created. Mankind has grown through the centuries with wood. Nothing can take its place.

Annual Building Review

MONTREAL Jewry is enjoying the interest and importance which comes of spending twenty-five million dollars in structure work. Today members of our Jewish community can point with a feeling of achievement to buildings which are the last word in design, luxury, and confort. On the south east corner of Peel and St. Catherine Street, will shortly be completed the Dominion Square Building—the largest building in Canada. Erected at a cost of ten million dollars, this building leaves nothing to be desired, combining as it does the best which science and art can offer with an unexcelled geographical location.

A little further north on Peel Street, opposite the Mount Royal Hotel stands the new head office building of Distillers Corporation. Built in Scotch Baronial style, this picturesque edifice has a charm which will endear it to lovers of the unique and beautiful in architecture.

The Sir Mortimer Davis Memorial Community Centre, the gift of the late Sir Mortimer Davis to the Y.M.H.A., has just been dedicated to the Jewish youth of Montreal. It is a fitting memorial. The careful planning backed by an expenditure of one half million dollars, has made of this structure one of the finest to be dedicated to the needs of a young men's athletic centre. Other modern communal buildings will shortly be added to this one, of which our Jewish community may well be proud.

The Y.M.H.A. is equipped with a modern luncheonette and soda fountain department which is prepared to serve light refreshments, sandwiches, etc., to 500 in one evening. The marble counter is essentially modern in spirit, the inside equipment being of Monel metal and nickel silver. An adjoining kitchen is well planned for storage purposes, etc. A completely modern Frigidaire equipment insures perfect service and satisfaction.

The Story of the "Y"

ON April 8, 1908, a group of young men met under the auspices of the Disraeli Conservative Political Club in the old Standard Hall, which was located at the corner of St. Lawrence and St. Catherine Streets. A suggestion was made that a cultural and athletic organization be formed under the name of Young Men's Hebrew Association. For several years previous, an organization called itself the Y.M.H.A. and met weekly in the Baron de Hirsch Institute. A move was made to a room at 52 Ontario St. West, and later to quarters downstairs at No. 54. When this became too small for the growing organization, another move was made to 495 St. Charles Borromee St., now known as Clark St.

In 1912 the building at 492 St. Urbain Street, then occupied by the St. Patrick A.A.A., was rented by the Y.M.H.A. and this building housed activites until 1916, when it was again found necessary to look for larger quarters. These were found at 283 Sherbrooke St. West. During all this time, the "Y" had no gymnasium of its own. A vision of a "Y" home with complete modern facilities, appeared before the young active membership; and a clamour arose for a bigger building with a gymnasium and swimming pool. The hopes of the enthusiasts were fulfilled when, through the instrumentality of the "Good and Welfare Council", the building at 3561 St. Urbain Street was purchased in 1920. There was still no swimming pool and the gymnasium was not everything that could be desired. However, in 1923, a "Boosters' Club," with the enthusiasm of youth, began to agitate for a better "Y". In defiance of all the prophets the "Boosters" conducted a campaign to raise money for a new gymnasium and, to the amazement of everyone, conjured up $7,500. The new gymnasium was ready in the fall. With this episode, the "modern" era of the "Y" History began. Be it said that the "Boosters" Club brought to the forefront "Y" workers who continue to this day to act as moving spirits in the Association. Being a Director of the "Y"

Dominion Square Building

IN three months time Montreal will possess one of the most modern office buildings in the world, incorporating in it many new ideas, such as a two storey arcade with shops at both levels, and a garage below with a capacity of more than six hundred cars.

A tenant in such a building, one can easily realize, will have numerous advantages over those of an ordinary building. He may drive to his office, park his car in the garage and then take one of the high speed elevators to the floor on which his office is located.

The building, designed by Ross & Macdonald, Architects, of Montreal, in Northern Italian style of architecture, is owned by the Dominion Square Corporation.

Three main entrance doors are provided, one from St. Catherine Street, one from Peel Street and one from Metcalfe Street. All these doors enter the Arcade. The entrance doors will be of bronze. The Arcade treatment will be stone faced walls with beamed and panelled ceilings, and travertine floor. The store fronts on each level will be walnut. From the Arcade at the St. Catherine Street entrance two of the latest types of escalators run to the Arcade Mezzanine. This floor, as well as the office floors and garage, are served with eight high speed elevators. An additional elevator for garage employees only runs from the main floor level to the 3rd sub-basement. On the office floors one will find very spacious elevator halls with stone wall treatment from floor to the ornamented plaster ceiling. The floors will be terrazzo in two colours, with brass strips inserted. The same floor treatment will extend into the corridors.

Offices of varying sizes are provided, all with direct daylight. Each office is provided with basin, ample and conveniently located electric outlets.

The garage will be equipped with a brake-testing machine, an extensive wash rack which will accommodate eleven cars at one time and supplied with all the latest type of mechanical equipment. Other departments include brake repair, tire repair, battery service, oiling and greasing, as well as a gasoline service department. The garage car entrances are located in the facade of the building facing the park, and separate up and down ramps are provided to reach each garage floor level.

From any floor of the building one can enter the garage by the elevators or from the main arcade to the garage waiting room.

The shops on the main floor, or arcade floor, as well as those on the arcade mezzanine have terrazzo floors divided with brass strip inserts, plaster walls and ceilings, and mahogany trim. Show windows are provided at each level, both to the street and to the Arcade.

A few of the outstanding facts in connection with this building, which measures 238'6" x 170'0", seventeen storeys in all including the garage floors, were the huge excavation 25 feet of which was in earth and the balance of 20 feet over the entire area in solid rock, the boiler room being another fifteen feet into the rock.

While the work was being proceeded with the steel frame and

The Dunham Differential Vacuum Heating System

Water boils at a lower temperature on a mountain top than at sea level because of the lesser atmospheric pressure. The Dunham Differential Vacuum Heating System is the scientific adaptation of this principle. Steam is circulated under a partial vacuum throughout the whole system. The degree of vacuum determines how "hot" or "cool" the steam will be. On mild days "cool" steam is circulated. In cold weather "hot" steam fills the radiators. The amount of heat is adapted to the condition of the weather. Thus there is no heat wasted.

The Dominion Square Building, now under construction, will stand pre-eminent among the finest office buildings in the Empire. It will be heated by the Dunham Differential Vacuum Heating System.

Heating systems are vitally important in great modern buildings. They cannot be chosen lightly—because the kind of service they give determines the comfort and affects the vitality and efficiency of hundreds of occupants—and their economy or wastefulness in fuel consumption bulks large in maintenance bills. It is more than a coincidence that owners, architects and engineers have selected the Dunham Differential Vacuum Heating System for many of the finest new buildings in Canada.

This unique system has revolutionized steam heating. It has made steam a docile slave that grows hotter or cooler at will, as weather conditions dictate. It keeps buildings at the desired degree of warmth in cold snap or thaw—during fall, winter and spring. It has done away with the irritating problem of overheating — and the fuel waste it causes. It provides more heating comfort with less fuel consumption. Fuel bills are substantially reduced because no heat is wasted.

These are the reasons why this system has been chosen for foremost buildings throughout the Dominion. They should have vital interest for you if you are associated in the planning or financing of a building or are faced with unsatisfactory heating in an existing building. Our engineers will gladly co-operate with you through the professions and trades.

"COOL" STEAM HEATS

The Dominion Square Building

At the top of Mount Robson water will boil at a far lower temperature than it will in Toronto or Montreal. In fact, it won't be hot enough properly to cook a potato. This fact modern engineers have taken advantage of in designing the Dunham Differential Vacuum Heating System, which is being installed in the Dominion Square Building, Montreal.

In old-fashioned system heating systems, the steam had to be more than hot enough to heat the radiators. It had to have pressure enough to force itself through all the pipes. The result was that nothing but very hot steam could be circulated, and the radiators were either too hot or too cold.

The mountain top showed engineers that there can be all kinds of steam and some of it not very hot, depending upon the pressure. So in the differential vacuum system, steam is circulated throughout pipes and radiators under a vacuum. The temperature of the steam is determined by the degree of vacuum. Thus, either a very tepid or a good warm steam can be sent to every part of the building. But never the old-fashioned super-hot steam.

This system will keep the Dominion Square Building adequately warm at all times because it can be adjusted to circulated either mountain-top steam or hill-top steam or the regular garden variety of Montreal steam. Thus, there will be no overheating or under-heating despite the very sudden and extreme changes in weather which occur in this district.

From the open fireplace to the differential vacuum heating system is a jump of less than one hundred years. But nobody ever thought until lately that there could be "lukewarm" steam for mild days and "hot steam for cold days, circulating like air through the heating system.

Like all contributions in the realm of science the simple things are the ones that prove successful, and so it is with this differential system. Engineers who have had a part in its development, and those who have observed it in operation are the first to say, "Well, why didn't someone think of that before."

Of course, the operation of this system which has made a docile slave of the giant steam is simple but Dunham engineers took many years to bring it to its present state of perfection and simplicity.

Both occupants and owners of the Dominion Square Building will benefit by the comfort and the economical operation of this most advanced type of heating.

The Unique Business Offices of the Distillers Corporation Limited Montreal

NOTABLE among the many new buildings which have been recently added to the architectural beauty of Montreal's business section are the new Head Offices of the Distillers Corporation Limited. Organized less than three years ago, this big British-Canadian industry is now established in this fine executive building. Located on Peel Street in the heart of the uptown shopping district of Montreal, this unique and interesting building combines the old world charm with all the traditions and memories of the romantic middle ages with the practical function of the executive offices of a great modern industry.

Built in Scotch Baronial style the gray stone front with its embattled rugged strength and solidity of the rampart and grim over-hanging turrets, would be formidable and forbidding were it not for the hospitably raised portcullis over the deep-set, arched entrance. This entire front might well have been taken in its entirety from some old Scotch chieftain's castle, the stones are all rough pick faced ashlar. The lower portion or base is formed by the main entrance with its embrasured walls with cambered arch above, and flanked on either side by projecting buttresses. Across the entire front over the entrance is a terrace or rampart with protecting battlements, with only a little imagination one can picture the armoured sentinels there in their gay tartans holding their pikes and claymores guarding the portal below. Back of this rampart rises in simple dignity the main wall of the building with two projecting towers or turrets with their narrow slit-like windows reminiscent of the old bartizan with their oylets and arrow slits for the archers and cross bow men. The carved panels in the window spandrels remind us of the days when the chieftains hung their bucklers and crests on the walls to avoid any uncertainty as to who was there in the castle or stronghold. Mounting the stone steps one passes between two carved stone chimeras those terrible legendary guardians and is immediately reassured by the fanciful Scottish terriers wrought in black iron to serve as foot scrapers.

D. J. Spence, Architect
Head Offices Distillers Corporation-Seagrams Limited

The character of the exterior of the building has been skilfully carried out in the interior and while the architect has shown a particularly happy touch in creating an atmosphere of the old baronial castle, he has, at the same time, been eminently successful in his design of a modern and efficient business office. One is instantly impressed with vari-colored slate flagging floor, laid in irregular pieces and rough polished. Heavy hand-hewn beams support the mezzanine floor on which the executive offices are situated. A dado, six feet in height, completely surrounds the general office and its construction is, perhaps, one of the building's outstanding features. It is of dull finished oak, with butterfly cleats and fastened to the wall in old ship deck style with circular wooden plugs. From the main floor a tile and cement stairway leads to the mezzanine floor. Stairways and mezzanine floor have a hand-wrought iron balustrade of special design. On the mezzanine railing, immediately opposite the entrance and in front of the board room doors, is fixed the hand-wrought insignia of the Distillers Corporation. Above the dado the walls are finished in Caen stone which rises some forty feet to the top of a large, glass covered light well and on the wall facing the mezzanine is displayed an interesting collection of ancient Scotch pikes, axes, colors, tartans and shields, each piece selected by the parent company in Great Britain for its historical connection with the period reproduced in this impressive Baronial Hall.

The board room, located on the mezzanine floor, and looking out over the Baronial Hall is panelled in dull oak and in one of its walls, this fine room. The floor is of rich oak in parquetry pattern. Walls and beamed ceiling are of Craftex soft and rich in color and texture. In the immediate front of the building on the mezzanine floor and on the floor above are the executive offices of the company. Each panelled in rich flush surface walnut to a height of seven feet with the walls above in Craftex. With infinite care and taste each panel carries a series of individual hand carved crests of the company and the whole effect of these fine rooms is one of comfort and dignity. On the second floor, reached by a tile and cement staircase, with hand-wrought iron balustrade, are located the accounting offices, bright and quiet, furnished and finished in keeping with the rest of the building. In the basement is the hand-irregularly laid and rough polished and a massive stone fire place is built in the walls at one end. The ceiling is of hand hewn oak beams and the general effect of the main office or Baronial hall is carried out in this fine display room where the products of the company will be assembled and suitably displayed. The light fixtures throughout the building are entirely hand made of wrought iron and each is specially designed for the particular location in which it is fixed.

From these handsome new quarters the multifarious details of marketing the following well-known brands are supervised and planned: Old Parr, Green Stripe, Peter Dawson, Sandy Macdonald, Old Mull and Robbie Burns Scotch Whiskies; Burnett's White Satin, Burnett's London Dry and Vicker's Gin; Seagram's "V.O.", "83" and "Fine Old Canadian" Rye Whiskies; Golden Wedding American Rye Whiskey and Old Log Cabin Bourbon Whiskey as well as a number of other Export Brands.

The following well-known British and Canadian business men are responsible for the marvellous progress this so recently organized business has made: President: Mr. William H. Ross, chairman and managing director of the British Company; Directors: Mr. Samuel Bronfman, president of the Globe Bedding Company, Ltd., of Winnipeg, vice-president of Brintcan Investments, Limited, and a holder of large business and investment interests throughout Canada; Mr. Allan Bronfman, B.A., LL.B., secretary-treasurer of Brintcan Investments, Limited, and also largely interested in industrial and other concerns in Ontario, Quebec and Western Canada; and Mr. W. B. Cleland of Hamilton, Ontario, who is vice-president of Distillers Company of Canada, Limited, (the holding company through which the British organization is connected with the Canadian one), and who was for several years general manager of the Ontario Government Liquor Dispensaries. Mr. Cleland has personal direction of the Seagram plant, while that of the Distillers Corporation is in charge of Mr. Samuel Bronfman.

To Mr. D. J. Spence, well-known architect of Montreal, goes the credit of designing and planning this interesting building. McRitchie and Block were the general contractors.

The Norwolfe Apartments at 1427 Mansfield Street just above St. Catherine is an apartment building consisting of 14 suites of one and two rooms. Designed by C. H. Goodman, architect and built by the Nouman Realties Limited for Louis Wolfe. In the heart of city activities, close to department stores, theatres and hotels. Expensively furnished and constructed in the most perfected manner. Large spacious rooms, bathrooms are tiled, with set in baths and showers. Kitchens are equipped with Frigidaire, gas stoves and Corkotile floors. Walls and floors are soundproofed with Celotex. Each apartment is exceptionally well decorated. Windows for each room have been provided, which afford the tenants the comfort of well aired bright apartments. Fire escapes leading from each individual premises classifies this building positively not to be a fire trap for human lives.

The Council of Jewish Women will maintain its camp at Lac Fourraille, near Shawbridge, in the Laurentians. Mrs. Samuel S. Colle is directress.

Felix Leopold is also building an exceedingly lovely home on Westmount Blvd. which will be ready for occupation this fall.

An order of outstanding importance in the line of fence construction was secured recently by The Steel Company of Canada Ltd., namely, the construction of a fence to enclose parking space at the new Royal York Hotel, Toronto. The Steel Company's Invincible Chain Link Fencing was specified.

A new Jewish hospital will soon be a reality.

The Spanish and Portuguese congregation which has worshipped for many years in its lovely synagogue on Stanley Street, is planning to build a new structure, to be situated in the western residential section.

The Shaare Zion Synagogue, on Claremont Avenue, is already too small for the vast Jewish population in Notre Dame de Grace and Westmount. Its congregation is planning a new building which, in all probability, will be in the vicinity of Cote Ste. Antoine Road and Girouard Avenue. It will comprise a three storey building, of which the first floor will be given over to a large religious school, its rooms and meeting rooms, the second floor to a library and assembly hall, and the third floor to the synagogue.

Important improvements are being made on Mount Sinai Sanatorium at Ste. Agathe, in the Laurentians.

In the realm of the theatre, too, the Jew has been active. The Consolidated Theatres Corporation, with Messrs. J. Arthur Hirsch, J. J. Rosenthal, A. Adilman, L. Shaw and M. Baruch, as directors, has recently renovated the Princess Theatre, which is now a high class essentially modern theatre, given over to talking feature films. Only a short while ago the Seville Theatre, with the finest of Spanish architecture, was erected by Ben Isaacs.

The Lido Venice, a colorful night club, was recently built by Daniel Stone on Stanley Street. Its colorful atmosphere and unique revues make it justly popular with Montreal's smart set.

Camp Bnai Brith will function again this summer at Prefontaine in the Laurentians.

Camp Sunshine will once more give its quota of sunshine and joy at its Camp in the Laurentians.

The Sir Mortimer B. Davis Memorial Building
Montreal Y.M.H.A.

AT the head of a long field of green sward which stretches up and down Park Avenue, stands the new home of the Young Men's Hebrew Association of Montreal. For many years this green spot has been the mecca of active youth. All the sports of the ball and the bat and the racket have flourished here, and continue here to flourish. Overlooking this perpetual scene of active life, where the ball flies in the summer time, and flashing skates cut the ice in the winter, The Sir Mortimer B. Davis Memorial Building now raises its simple and impressive facade. On one side of it, the wooded slopes of Mount Royal ascend majestically to the sky, beckoning in the successive seasons as well to skiers as to lovers of the untamed woods. Facing it is Fletcher's Field. Round about lies a region of homes and shops, and a network of transportation lines, rendering the building central, easily accessible, and in every respect, ideally located.

As you enter through the main doorway on Mount Royal Avenue, your eye rests upon a highly polished black and white marble staircase leading to the lobby. Once within, you pause to admire the fine terrazzo tiling, the oak panelling, and the economy of space which puts every part of the building within easy reach of this main lobby. Facing you is the neatly equipped general office, and on either side of it range the well appointed Board Room and the main check-room. Proceeding to the left, you look upon a cosy Intermediate Lounge Room, and, further along, you find yourself in the handsome Senior Lounge room replete with fireplace, radio, and trophy cases, chess and checker tables, and magazine racks. Further along the corridor, you find yourself in the Library—one of the finest branches of the building. Stable finished steel shelves, reference sections, magazine and newspaper racks, study and reading tables equipped with scientifically treated lighting devices, handsome librarian's counter, dainty chiming clock, and club chairs grouped about the windows for recreational reading—this equipment fills a room especially designed for cleanness, utility and comfort.

Retracing your steps and proceeding to the right of the main entrance you look in upon a dainty ladies' lounge room, furnished with attractive drapes, settees, and console set. Further along, past the Memorial Tablet, you find yourself in the beautiful foyer, equipped with davenports and radio, and designed to hold art exhibits to the best advantage. Another check-room and a men's smoking room open from the foyer, while a neat stairway to the mezzanine floor leads to a comfortable ladies' check-room and rest room.

The Auditorium, off the other end of the Foyer, is as neat and charming as a marble miniature. Its stage is fully equipped with all theatrical desiderata, from dressing rooms to pulleys and from concealed footlights to a silver screen for motion pictures. As a theatre, the auditorium will hold five hundred people. But, in a twinkling, all the seats can be bundled into specially designed racks, and stored underneath the stage, leaving the auditorium free for dancing or banqueting. The floor is especially created for dancing purposes. The projection room above the hall is equipped with motion picture apparatus and spotlights.

Crossing to the marble-surfaced staircase, you descend to the lower floor. Facing you is the basket-room with its 2000 baskets for gymnasium outfits, and an electrical control for the doors leading to the several locker- and shower-rooms. The latter are tiled to the ceiling, and are equipped with the best pressure and drying apparatus. As you pass into the main gymnasium, you are struck by the height and airiness of the huge room. Apparatus of every description abound. Floor markings provide for basket-ball, badminton, indoor tennis, indoor baseball, and other indoor games. A gallery with seating space for 200 people runs along the sides of the gym.

A few steps away is the entrance to the smaller gymnasium, which besides the usual outfit, contains the boxing and wrestling apparatus, and an ingenious folding-door contrivance for handball courts.

From the locker rooms you may go on to the regulation size swimming pool which occupies the entire eastern end of the building. Constant water circulation through a filtering plant has been provided, inset ladders, polo equipment, and diving board complete the structure of this splendid department. Seating space for a limited number of spectators is also provided.

As you return toward the basket room, you take two steps to the left, and find yourself in the bowling alley. Here you find three standard alleys, snugly built, and in a location easily accessible from every part of the building.

Near the gymnasia are the two offices of the physical instructors and the swimming instructor. At other points, you find cupboard and storage space, all fitted in so ingeniously, that not an inch of space is wasted.

If you venture below the ground floor, you will find yourself looking into the physical heart of the building. In a large room, airy, and painted white, stand the electrical control system, the two heating plants, the water filtration plant, the ventilation plant, the thermostatic service, the pumps, and a maze of other power machinery. A the service elevator and two staircases provide access to this part of the building.

Now retrace your steps and walk up the low staircase to the top story. This portion of the building has been given over to the prospective club and educational work of the Institution. You find a large, light, junior game room at the head of the stairs, equipped with ping-pong and other junior games, boys' magazines, checkers, and many other contrivances. Down the long corridor, you pass nine class-club rooms, so designed and furnished as to combine the ease of the latter with the efficiency of the former. Four of these rooms, you find, are connected by removable doors, rendering them easily changeable into convenient lecture halls for groups of one hundred persons. Along this corridor, too, is the office provided for an educational director. At the west end of the corridor is the bright four-room apartment of the building superintendent.

Having completed the round, you pause to take your bearings. Obviously, the exterior gives not a iota of an idea as to what great, spacious, rooms the interior boasts. The equipment, you find, is of the finest, the most comfortable, the most useful. The building itself, you feel sure, gives out a sense of solidity and permanency. You stop to pay tribute to the care which brought all this to be.

The floors in the new homes of Mrs. Sam Leopold and Mrs. ~~Felix~~ Leopold, Westmount Avenue, were furnished and completely installed by Montreal Wood Parquetry Floor Co.

Such floors as graced the Ancient Castles and "great homes" of Europe were used in the following rooms and design:

Sun Room & Arcade and Boudoir: Style "Adams Venetian" in Quarter Cut White Oak.

Upper Hall: Jacobean Design, in Quarter Cut White Oak, and Mahogany.

Living Room: French Herringbone in Walnut.

Dining Room: Style "Louis XV Guirland" in Quarter Cut White Oak.

The Supreme Beauty and Distinction of these floors is reminiscent of days when Style was preeminent in Oak Floors, and harmonize entirely with the period furniture and decorations in the various rooms.

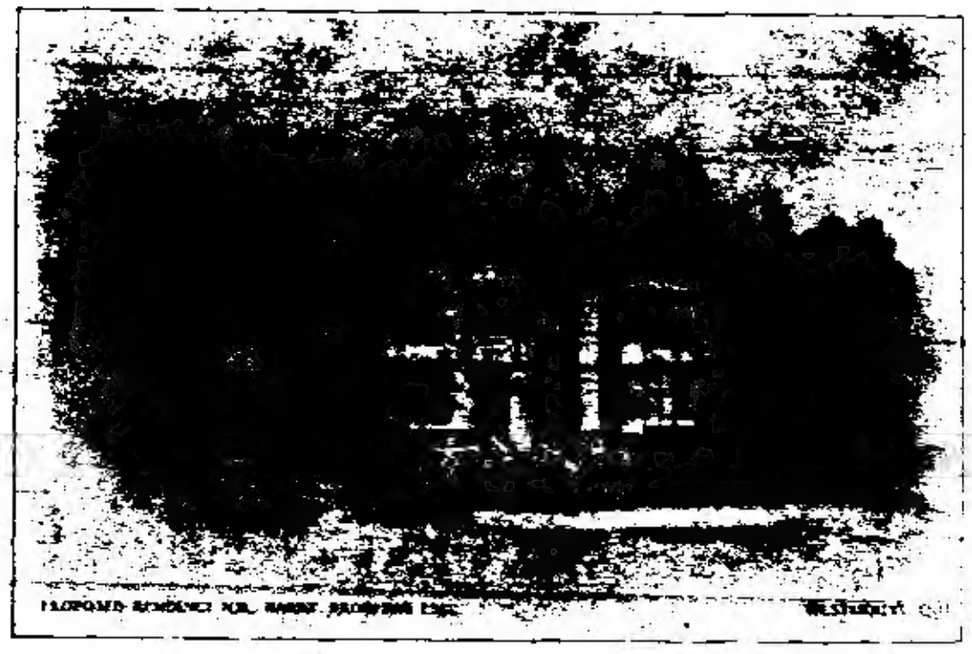
Exterior and Interior Wood Millwork for H. BRONFMAN HOME is being supplied by

Daniel Cream Limited

MANUFACTURERS OF SASHES, DOORS, FINE MILLWORK, ROUGH AND DRESSED LUMBER, TIMBER ETC.



New Residence for Harry Bronfman,
J. Gillett & Co., General Contractors Perry & Luke Architects

This year has seen remarkable additions to the architecture of Montreal as regards exceedingly fine residences. One of the show places on Westmount Blvd., is the home of H. Bronfman.

It is situated well back from the street on Westmount Blvd., and will be approached by a semicircular driveway which will enable cars to drive in and out without turning. The grounds will be laid out in a semi-formal way to be in keeping with the design of the house.

The house has been designed in the Tudor style with a certain freedom of application, although every effort is being made to reproduce the feeling of the English Manor house. The chimneys are high and are made of special hand made bricks and the roof covering is antique type red tile laid in the English manner.

The exterior of the building is in natural stone—the trim being Queenstown limestone, while the walls are formed of various stones laid with horizontal joints forming "Scotchwork".

The architects, Perry & Luke, have given special attention to the interior, which has been laid out in spacious rooms. These will conform in general design to the style of the exterior. The important rooms will be panelled in wood to the ceilings and these will be decorated with precast plaster ornament which will be painted in colours in the early Renaissance manner.

One of the features of the house will be the large stained glass window of the entrance hall, containing roundels picturing scenes from the early history of Canada.

Bathrooms have been given special study and colour will play an important part in the fittings and tiling of these rooms. The ceilings will be vaulted and decorated with a light form of ornament. One bathroom will be decorated in black, red and gold.

Mr. Gilletz, of J. Gilletz & Co. contractors, is giving the work his personal supervision and in order to carry out the designs of the architects, is having windows and tilework made in England, plumbing fittings in the States and marble work in Italy.

S. Leopold is now occupying a very beautiful Spanish stucco residence which stands high on a terrace on Westmount Blvd. The building, of stucco and red tile, has black iron grill work and lovely grilled windows. The interior is most attractive with its stone foyer and wrought iron staircase. Mrs. S. Leopold has herself designed her breakfast room in tones of orange and black. The bathrooms, too, which are modernistic in detail, are also of her design. One is in blue and black marble; the other of mauve and black marble. R. Shapiro has been in charge of interior decorating. J. Gersovitz was the general contractor. The floors which are unusually beautiful, have been installed by the Montreal Wood Parquetry and are of lovely designs.

The Adams Acanthe pattern was inlaid in brown and fawn in the sun room, bedroom, and boudoir, the Jacobean style was used for the upper hall. The dining room is after the French Fontainebleau design and the living room is of solid walnut in French herringbone pattern.

Thornburg Bros. planned the garden which has a fountain and a lovely rockery.

R. D. Clark & Sons Limited who are the plastering contractors on the Distillers Corporation Building, have all modern equipment for the handling of large Contracts. They have 5 mortar mixers, run 3 trucks and own a large yard on St. James St., for stocking of equipment and materials.

The following are some of the large contracts which R. D. Clark & Sons Limited, has executed throughout the Dominion, All Saints Cathedral, Halifax; Nova Scotia Cold Storage, Halifax; Reconstruction for Commission after explosion Halifax; Reconstruction for Commission after explosion Darmouth, Algonquin Hotel, St. Andrews by the Sea, N.B.; Jeffery Hale Hospital, Quebec; Grande Allee Apts. WHAT THE CHILDREN SAY

Subscribers of the CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW are invited to send in little stories about their youngsters or children they know, what they say and do in interesting situations. Write down what your little one said to-day and mail it to the What-the-Children-Say Editor, REVIEW office, in Toronto or Montreal. Give the child's full name, age, address and the name of his parents. One dollar will be paid for every story printed.

"Do you think money is really everything?" I shot back. "One might be able to find a thing or two which could not be bought with it."

"Not even at Ridley's?" he jested, but he was manifestly beginning to resent my attitude and to take our passage at arms rather seriously.

"Not even at Ridley's. You can't get brains there, can you?"

"Well, I never learned to write, but I have a learned fellow in my office. He's chuck full of learning and that sort of thing. Yet who is working for whom I for him or he for me? So much for education—for the stuff that's in a man's head. And now let's take charity—the stuff that's in a man's heart. I don't care what you say, but of what use is a good heart unless he has some jingles[1] to go with it? You can't shove your hand nto your heart and pull out a few dollars for a poor friend, can you? You can help him out of your pocket, though—that is, provided it is not empty."

My bewigged little landlady was casting her eyes on her son.

Meyer went on with his argument: "What is a man without capital? Nothing! Nobody cares for him. He is like a beast. A beast can't talk, and he can't. 'Money talks,' as the Americans say."

His words and manner put me in a socialist mood. He was hateful to me. I listened in morose silence. He felt piqued, and he wilted. The ginger went out of his voice. My taciturnity continued, until, gradually, he edged over to my side of the controversy, taking up the cudgels for education and spiritual excellence with the same force with which he had a short while ago tried to set forth their futility.

"Of course it's nice to be educated," he said. "A man without writing is just like a deaf mute. What's the difference? The man who can't write has speech in his mouth, but he is dumb with his fingers, while the deaf mute he can't talk with his mouth, but he can do so with his fingers. Both should be pitied. I do like education. Of course I do. Don't I send my boy to college? I am an ignorant boor myself, because my father was poor, but my children shall have all the wisdom they can pile in. We Jews have too many enemies in the world. Everybody is ready to shed our blood. So where would we be if many of our people were not among the wisest of the wise? Why, they would just crush us like so many flies. When I see an educated Jew I say to myself, 'That's it!'"

When he heard of my ambition to give lessons he said:

"I tell you what. I'll be your first pupil. I mean it," he added seriously.

My heart gave a leap. "Very well. I'll try my best," I replied.

"Mind you, I don't want to be a philosopher. I just want you to fix me up in reading, writing, and figuring a little bit. That's all. You don't think it's too late, do you?"

"To late!" I chuckled, hysterically. "Why?"

"I can sign or indorse a check, and, thank God, for a good few dollars, too—but when it comes to fixing in the stuffing, there is trouble. I know how to write the figures, but not the words. I can write almost any number. If I was worth all the money I can put down in figures I should be richer than Vanderbilt."

To insure secrecy I was to give him his lessons in my attic room.

"I don't want my kids to know their pa is learning like a little boy, don't you know," he explained. "American kids have not much respect for their fathers, anyhow."

As a preliminary to his initial lesson Nodelman offered to show me what he could do. When I brought pen and ink and some paper he cleared his throat, screwed up a solemn mien, and took hold of the pen. In trying to shake off some of the ink he sent splashes all over the table. At last he proceeded to write his name. He handled the pen as he would a pitchfork. It was quite a laborious proceeding, and his first attempt was a flasko, for he reached the end of the paper before he finished the "n" in Nodelman. He tried again, and this time he was successful, but it was three minutes before the task was completed. It left him panting and wiping his ink-stained fingers on his hair.

"A man who has to work as hard as that over his signature has no business to be seen among decent people," he said, with sincere disgust. "I ought to be a horsedriver, not a manufacturer."

So speaking, he submitted his signature for my inspection, without, however, letting go of the sheet.

"Tell me how rotten it is," he said, humbly.

When I protested that it was not "rotten" at all he granted something to the effort that once I was to instruct him he would expect to pay me, not for empty compliments, but for the truth. At this he lighted a match and applied it to the sheet of paper containing his signature.

"A signature is no joke," he explained, as he watched it burn. "Put a few words and some figures on top of it and it is a note, as good as cash. When a fellow is a beggar he has nothing to fear, but when he is in business he had better be careful."

When he asked me how much I was going to charge him and I said twenty-five cents an hour, he smiled.

"I'll pay you more than that. You just try your best for me, will you?"

At the end of the first week he handed me two dollars for three lessons.

I was the happiest man in New York that day. If I had had to choose between earning ten dollars a week in tuition fees and a hundred dollars in wages or profits I should, without the slightest hesitation, have decided in favor of the ten dollars, and now, behold! that coveted source of income seemed nearer at hand than I had dared forecast. Once a start had been made, I might expect to procure other pupils, even if they could not afford to pay as lavish a price as two dollars for three lessons.

It Came to Pass That——

—By Dr. Cecil Roth, of London, England, fellow of the Royal Historical Society.

JUNE 28TH.

David Salomons returned to Parliament, 1851. He was not indeed the first Jew to be elected, the City of London having repeatedly chosen Baron Lionel de Rothschild as one of its representatives since 1847. The latter, however, had not been allowed to take his seat. Salomons, however, on obtaining a majority in a bye-election at Greenwich, was not disposed to be so submissive. Without repeating the statutory oath 'on the true faith of a Christian,' he therefore took his seat, going even so far as to take part in debate and to vote in no less than three divisions. Ultimately, he was forced to withdraw and proceeded against for a very heavy sum by a Common Informer. His action, however, was not without its influence on public opinion, and contributed in no small measure to the ultimate success of the emancipatory movement six years later.

JUNE 29TH.

The Emekh haBakha ended, 1575. Joseph haCohen, a Genoese physician of Spanish descent, had been stirred by the example of secular chronicles to make a similar compilation dealing with the history of his own people, from the destruction of the Temple downwards. It was inevitably in the main a record of persecution which fully justified the title The Vale of Tears. A more heart-rending composition is hardly to be found in any literature; and the author himself more than once figured in the tragic events which he describes. The work was as a matter of fact finished in the little town of Costelletto in the Monferrato, by reason of the expulsion of all Jews from the Genoese territories eight years previous. In view of the nature of the book, it is hardly to be wondered if it was not printed until the dawn of toleration in the nineteenth century. Recently, it has been translated into German and French. That it has not yet appeared in English is little short of a disgrace.

JUNE 30TH.

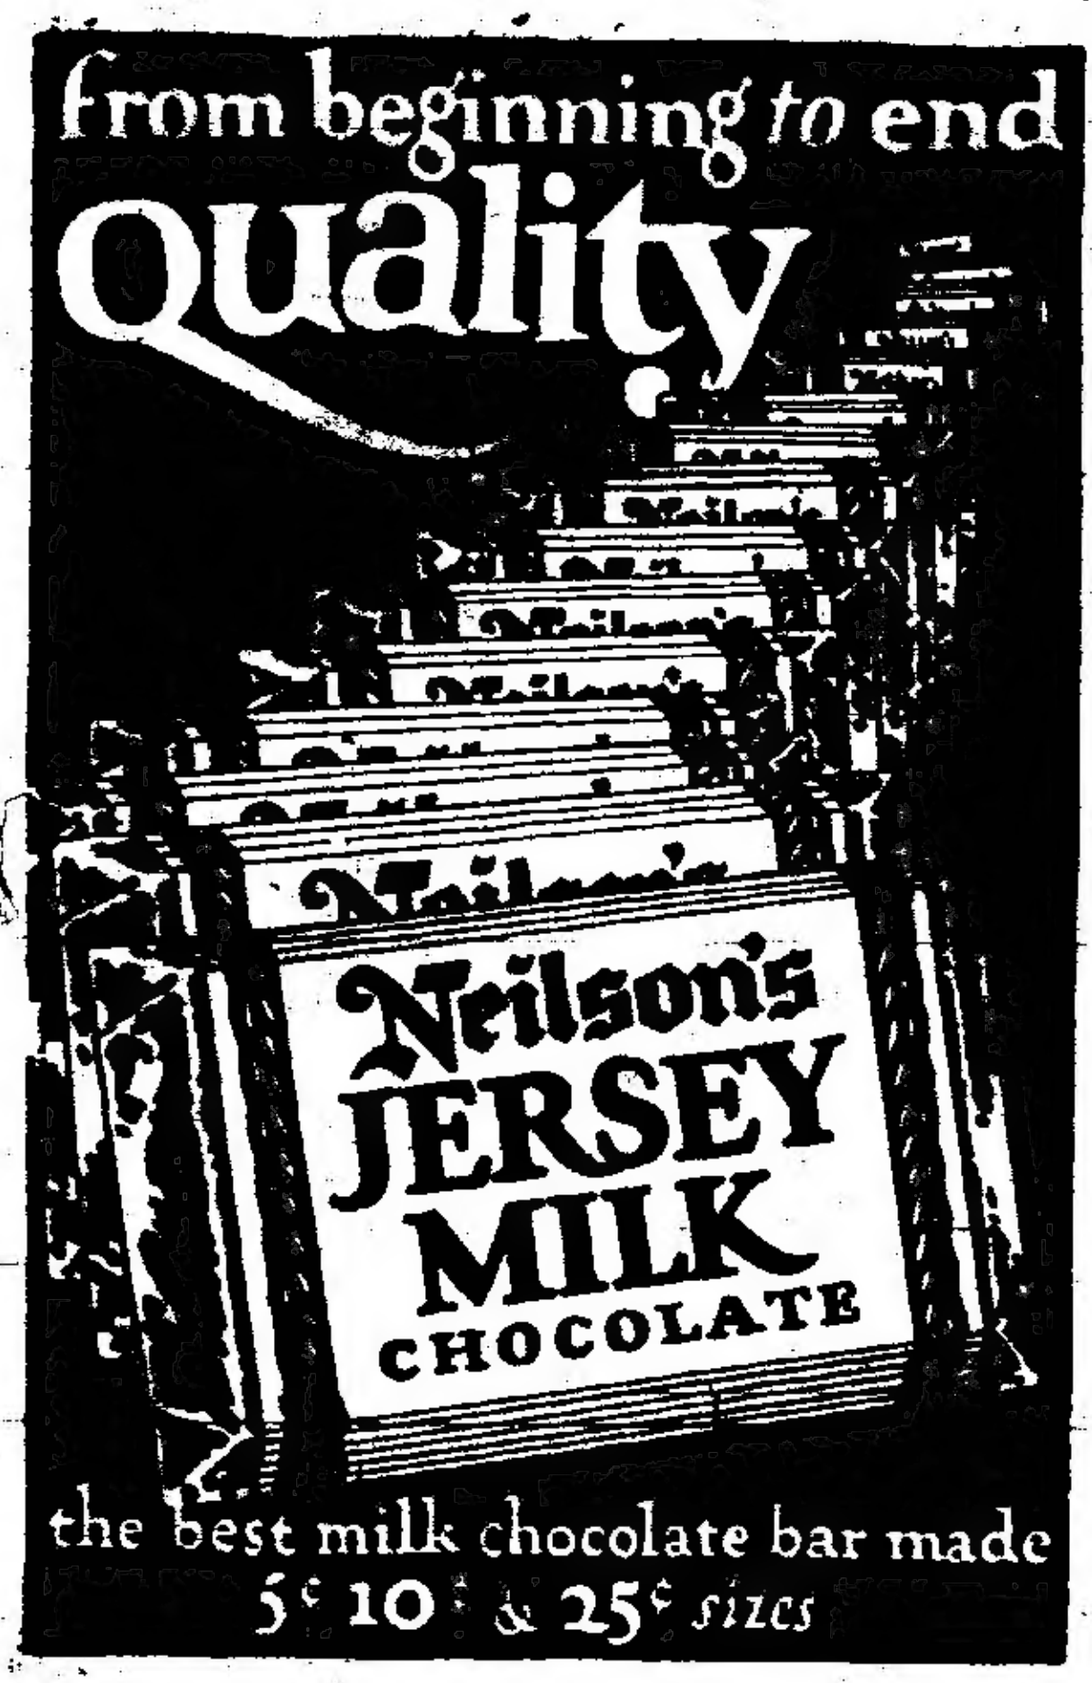
Auto at Madrid, 1680. This was the last and greatest of the autos publicos generales, celebrated as the acme of festivity in the presence of royalty. It took place before the young Carlos II and his consort, Louise-Marie d'Orleans, in honour of their marriage. There were sixty-seven penitents and fifty-one relaxations, nineteen of which were 'in person'. Of these, almost all were Jews. The ceremony began at about six o'clock in the morning, and lasted for fourteen hours. It is said that one strikingly beautiful girl of about seventeen called out, as she passed the royal stand: 'Noble Queen, cannot your royal presence save me from this? I sucked in my religion with my mother's milk; must I now die for it?' This spectacle was the last of its kind, as Philip V, first of the line of Bourbon, refused to grace with his presence the auto general proposed to be held in celebration of his succession, so that the custom was finally abandoned.

JULY 1ST.

Charge of Host Desecration at Paris, 1290. A Jew named Jonathan and his wife, living in the Rue des Billettes, were accused of having 'tortured' the consecrated elements. The sacrilege was discovered, it was alleged, by the appearance upon the water of clots of blood which nothing could stop: most likely, in point of fact, the micrococcus prodigiosus, which can appear on any stale food substance left in a damp place. The 'culprits' were burned to death at the stake, and their house razed to the ground, a chapel being erected on the site. The 'Miracle of the Rue des Billettes' is still annually celebrated in Paris down to the present day.

JULY 2ND.

Foundation of the Anglo-Jewish Association, 1871. The war of 1870 had interrupted the activities of the Alliance Israelite Universelle, and the bitterness which followed in its train seemed to preclude the possibility of international co-operation in the movement in the immediate future. These considerations led a group of English Jews, headed by Dr. Benisch and the Rev. A. Lowy, to bring to fruition an idea which they had entertained for some considerable time before of forming a similar organization in England. A preliminary gathering on March 25th., 1871, was followed by a public meeting on July 2nd., at which the Association was formally constituted. Within the first year, branches were formed in Manchester, Liverpool, and Birmingham, and promises of support were received from the colonies. The educational activities which it fostered soon spread from Mogador to Mesopotamia, and beyond. As one of the parent bodies of the Russo-Jewish Committee (1882) and the Joint Foreign Committee (1878) the Association has deserved well of the Jewish community at large.



JULY 3RD.

Religious freedom in Germany, 1869. Titular emancipation had spread through the most important parts of the country from the Year of Revolutions onwards, and by now was the rule in Prussia, Hanover, Wurttemberg, Saxony, and elsewhere. The movement came-to-a-climax after the establishment of the North German Confederation, when by a law of July 3rd, 1869, all existing restrictions imposed upon followers of different religions were abolished. This was extended to the remaining provinces of the German Empire after 1870. Upon this same date, by a coincidence, the Jewish Synod at Leipzig formed the Deutsch-Israelitischer Gemeindebund, or Union of German-Jewish Congregation, which has become notable for its educational and charitable activities.

JULY 4TH.

Declaration of American Independence, 1776. For the first time in the history of the modern world, it was enunciated by a responsible body that all men are created equal and are thereby endowed with certain inalienable rights. After this, it was impossible to escape logically the embodiment in the Constitution of the United States of America (accepted by the thirteenth of the original States in 1790) of a clause to the effect that no religious test should be required as qualification for any public office or post of trust. It was this Anglo-Saxon lead, rather than the doctrinaire Declaration of the Rights of Man thirteen years later, which pointed the way to Jewish Emancipation.

in 1909, when the first house was rented, required financial genius of a high order. There were only $15 in the "Treasury." How pay the first month's rent of $25. Where to obtain the $5 fee of the rental agent? And what to do about furniture and equipment? With the grim smiles of pioneers, the ten youthful directors emptied their pockets, and taxed themselves $2.50 each. The initial debts were paid at once, and a huge first installment of $9.00 solved the furniture problem. The Association sat on its rickety chairs and counted the balance in the bank—one dollar.

The weekly membership fee of twenty-five cents not proving sufficient for the needs of the day, time and again the directors were obliged to throw themselves into the financial breach. At one time, indeed, the landlord seized the "Y" furniture and held it until the Directors collected the overdue sum among themselves. At another time, John, well-remembered caretaker of our Clarke St. home had eleven month's salary due him. The Charter obtained in 1910 must have come as a relief to the harassed Directors, since they would no longer be held personally liable for the Association's debts. These quaint financial struggles did not go unheeded. In 1911 a mass meeting was held to explain the needs of the Y.M.H.A. The late Alderman James Robinson, a non-Jewish friend of the Association, contributed $100, and other community-minded people followed his lead. This meeting marked the beginning of general communal interest in the "Y." In 1912, to the great good fortune of the Association the late Jacob Goldstein assumed the Presidency. Until the end of his life he remained a staunch friend of the Y.M.H.A. Under his regime, the critical financial situation began to me met with intense activity and sound management, and the tide began to turn.

In 1916 a campaign to raise a building fund resulted in the collection of $20,000. This sum being inadequate for immediate use, was put away for the future, and constituted the nest-egg which enabled the "Y" in 1920 to purchase the home of the Shamrock A.A.A. at 697 (3561) St. Urbain Street. By this time, the members had such bright hopes and firm confidence in the future, that they declined the proposal of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies that the Y.M.H.A. become a constituent member of that organization. A fundamental issue was represented in this offer, upon the decision of which rested the entire fortune of the Y.M.H.A. At this time, however, the basis of the Association was broadening, and a sense of institutional loyalty began to animate the hearts of many active members. It was thought, therefore, that so long as the "Y" showed signs of being able to maintain itself, unaided by Federation, it would be undesirable to divert Federation funds from equally worthy and more needy institutions. Not long afterwards, the Association was the grateful recipient of $1000 willed to the "Y" by the late Lazarus Cohen, a noted Hebrew scholar, and President of the Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue.

From 1921 to 1929 the membership fees, including the amounts paid by non-active and contributing members have constituted the bulk of the Association's income. These, supplemented by income from several activities have served to keep the program of the "Y" in operation.

As no gymnasium facilities were available in the early days, such outdoor sports as Snowshoe tramps, skating, baseball and football were the chief interests, while the "house" was used for Social evenings, Lectures, Debates and Smokers. The first annual picnic and first annual ball were held in 1910. At the same time some gymnasium apparatus was rigged up in the basement of 54 Ontario St. West, and Charles Lambert became voluntary physical instructor. For fourteen years Mr. Lambert remained on the Staff of the Association, doing splendid work in the Physical-educational and Musical field. Old members still recall Mr. Lambert's distinctive basketball coaching, and Dr. Gadbois' demonstrations of Jiu Jitsu in the dim atmosphere of this first gymnasium. W. C. Munn, a teacher in the Montreal High School, undertook a literary program which he carried on for several years. In 1911 the Orchestra was organized. In 1912, under the presidency of the late Jacob Goldstein the program took on a much larger form, and in addition to the activities already organized were added, a bicycle club, speaking contest, Passover and Chanukah celebrations, chess and checker tournaments, Friday night talks, Saturday afternoon Jewish History Class, Harrier team, swimming club, water polo team, Junior and Intermediate basket ball, and bowling. A synagogue was instituted and has been maintained to this day. With the exception of the Synagogue, the efforts of the Association, though most successful, were not always continuous over many years.

The membership numbered 340 at the end of 1911, but an intensive membership campaign in 1912 added 1260 names, thus placing our Association in the list as the second largest Y.M.H.A. in the world at that time; the New York organization holding first place.

The building occupied was, however, far too small for a membership of 1500, and for lack of accommodation, many dropped away, until in 1916, only 300 were left. Since that year the membership has gradually increased until it reached 2200 in 1929. Continuity of membership is a recent achievement in the "Y", marking the end of the period of experimentation, and the beginning of a definite recognition of the communal value of the Association.

Alderman Louis Rubenstein, became President in 1917, and has proved a large factor in the success of the Institution in the years since. His previous experience in similar organizations was of great benefit, and under his leadership combined with that of Sol Kellert, who had long been an ardent worker for the Y.M.H.A., the Association was established on a firm basis.

The advent of Mr. Kellert as the Patron extraordinary of all good works in the "Y" signified the importance which the Association was assuming in the eyes of the leading men of the community. Mr. Kellert has devoted literally years of his life to the interests of the "Y". Be it a membership campaign, the "Y" orchestra, the "Y" Boy Scout troop, the "Y" public speaking course, tennis courts, athletic rallies, or latterly, the careful construction of the new home of the "Y", Mr. Kellert has given himself with unmatched unselfishness. As chairman of the Building Committee, Mr. Kellert has divorced himself from all non "Y" interests during the past three years, and as devoted himself exclusively to the affairs of the Building.

With the influx of members resulting from the better gymnasium facilities offered in 1923, the office and supervisory work was greatly augmented. With the exception of the Secretary and the Physical Instructor, who were paid officials, the work of the Association was carried on by volunteers. But the period after 1920 was marked by an ever-increasing public interest in the "Y". Club life was expanding, and people were expecting greater effectiveness and more definite programs to guide the "Y" activities. Under these circumstances the need of a trained Executive Director became more and more apparent. This resulted in the engagement of the first Executive Director, M. H. Weinstein, in 1925. Mr. Weinstein's regime was marked by an attempt to develop the Community Centre idea, as it has been established in the United States, and steps were taken in this direction in 1926, by the addition of women's evening classes and clubs. At the same time the general membership having grown by natural stages, definite prospects for the future of the Association began to assume shape, and the "Y" began to be regarded as a healthy and "coming" organization.

It was the intention of the Board of Directors to prepare for a Building Fund Campaign as soon as the time was ripe, but in September 1926, came the announcement of Sir Mortimer B. Davis' never-to-be-forgotten gift to the Y.M.H.A. of Montreal. The Association was to have a modern home, replete with all facilities for physical and cultural work. Sir Mortimer was to supply funds for land, building, and furniture. This was the only gift of its kind ever made by a philanthropist to a Y.M.H.A.; a gift princely in amount, princely in conception, princely in the results expected by the donor. The community was stirred by the news of Sir Mortimer's magnificent contribution to communal welfare. The Y.M.H.A. was profoundly moved by the realization of the great opportunity now opened to it. In the midst of general rejoicing, word came of the passing of Sir Mortimer Davis from this life on March 22, 1928. He did not live to see the concrete result of his generosity. The Jews of Canada mourned his loss, and the Building Committee which had been appointed by Sir Mortimer to supervise the construction of the new Y.M.H.A. home, and which had laboured so unstintingly for that cause, decided that this same building shall forever remain a memorial to the spirit of wisdom which animated the late donor. The Sir Mortimer B. Davis Memorial Building will consequently be dedicated in the presence of Lord Shaughnessy and Lady Davis, Executors of the Estate, on June 23, 1929.

Housed in this palatial structure, the Y.M.H.A. of Montreal begins life anew. A new Charter has been issued, giving a new corporate character to the Association. A new Executive Director in the person of Harvey Golden has been engaged to replace Mr. Weinstein, who resigned in 1928. A new and many-sided program will utilize all the admirable facilities of the new home. In the twenty-second year of its existence, the Association sets its face towards a future which promises to exert a vigorous influence upon the Jewish youth of Canada.—Y.M.H.A. Beacon.

Transfer Made of Memorial Y.M.H.A.

Unanimous tribute to the sterling qualities of the late Sir Mortimer B. Davis, as the outstanding Jewish philanthropist in Canada, as a foremost financial and business genius, and as a very public-spirited man, was paid by Rt. Hon. Lord Shaughnessy, K.C., a personal friend and associate; Mayor Camillien Houde, Michael Hirsch, honorary president of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, and many leaders of communal life at the dedication ceremonies connected with the transfer of the Sir Mortimer B. Davis Memorial Building, Mount Royal avenue, to the Y.M.H.A. by executors of the estate.

Lady Davis made a special trip from the continent to be present on the momentous occasion, and in company with Lord Shaughnessy, joint executor, handed over the deeds to Ald. Louis Rubenstein.

Lord Shaughnessy declared that he had never met a man who had the interest of poor people so much at heart as his friend, Sir Mortimer B. Davis. "His love for the masses, his intense regard for the welfare of those who were in need, and the substantial aid he gave them were a source of inspiration to all who came in contact with him. No prejudices marred the beauty and strength of his manhood; his was the understanding heart that knew no bounds of race or creed. He realized that there was a need to build Jewish youth physically as well as mentally, and with that clarity of vision for which he was noted he planned the present spacious headquarters for their communal activities. He possessed a kindly and ultra just nature," he continued, "and his labors in bringing happiness and sunshine into homes afforded him a great amount of pleasure. It is to be regretted that he is not present to see the fulfilment of his dreams." In conclusion Lord Shaughnessy paid tribute to Sol. Kellert, honorary president; A. H. Jassby, and Ald. Louis Rubenstein, of the building committee, who handled building operations expeditiously.

The relationship and influence of Sir Mortimer B. Davis on Jewish philanthropic and communal enterprises were enumerated by Michael Hirsch, honorary president of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies.

Mayor Camillien Houde stated that he felt honored in taking part in the dedication ceremonies of an institution devoted to the development of a high type of manhood and citizenship among the young men of the Hebrew community.

He declared it was most fitting that such a magnificent structure should be dedicated to the memory of one of Montreal's greatest financial figures. "Sir Mortimer's philanthropies and public benefactions were many and varied," he continued, and chief in his eyes was the proper guidance of youth. The new Y.M.H.A. will be a pulsating monument to his memory, and with the help of this noble gift from one who admirably combined the energy and enthusiasm of youth with the wisdom and experience of maturer years, we can look forward to continued success on the part of the institution."

Sol. Kellert, honorary president expressed appreciation of the kindness of Lady Davis in crossing the ocean to be present on dedication day. He said that every brick of the new Y.M.H.A. carried a message of Sir Mortimer's idealism and high regard for Jewish traditions.

Prior to unveiling a bust of Sir Mortimer B. Davis, in the lobby, A. H. Jassby, on behalf of the building committee, delivered an eulogy of their benefactor.

Earlier in the day Ald. Louis Rubenstein laid the cornerstone, and M. Levitt, secretary, placed the copper box containing coins of the realm and periodicals relative to the dedication, and later unveiled the memorial tablet erected by members of the association.

Horace R. Cohen, vice-president, was in charge of all activities during the ceremonies.

In order to help in the task of giving to American Jewry a real insight into the problem of European relief, the Menorah Journal is publishing a series of articles dealing with the situation in various countries. This column will give the gist of them, in parts verbatim, beginning with the one by Abraham Revutsky on "How Help Russian Jewry?" which appeared in the May issue:

American Jewish relief work through the first years of the Revolution in Russia, the pogroms of 1919-1920 and the famine of 1921-1922 was limited to pure philanthropy and the first period of help by the Joint Distribution Committee was consumed with feeding and clothing refugees, fighting disease, etc. In the second period of American help the Joint embarked on the scheme of Russian Jewish agricultural colonization in the Crimea and southern Ukrainia and in five years the number of Jewish farmers in Russia has been doubled so that in 1928 there were over 150,000 Jews on the land, a remarkable achievement. But the process of settling Jews on the land is insufficient toward the solution of the problems of some 3,000,000 Jews. The plight of at least one third of this number is desperate and for their relief something else must be devised. The third stage of American Jewish relief in Russia is now at hand. It will have to be an effort to aid the bulk of the Jews without removing them from their homes and industrialization is the only thing.

Russia needs no more farmers and its main economic problem is the gradual transfer of a great part of the rural populace to cities and factories. With the introduction of modern farm machinery into Russia the country will face a vast overproduction of farm products which must be offset by a reduction in the peasant population. Since the War and the Revolution Russia has been displaced in the world grain market and the possibilities of export of grain are strictly limited. So if native Russian peasants will be forced to look for work in the cities, the Jewish farmers must, too. Thus, desirable as colonization has been considered by American philanthropists, it is now felt that it does not meet the fundamental problem of the large masses. In order to do this the declassed traders and Luftmensch must be enabled to produce shoes, clothes and foods for the Russian villages because the Soviet Government has been too busy building up basic industries (steel, oil, etc.) to develop the middle-sized ones and the Jew could fill this important gap in Russian economic life. To help in this is to follow the least costly way of permanent relief since it costs only one-quarter or one-fifth as much per family to provide a secure living through industrial work as it does through farm work.

Industrial relief must provide artisans with tools; train Jewish youth in skilled trades and help erect factories in Jewish towns to employ declassed Jews. To supply tools is not enough because the economic situation is not favorable to the individual artisan. An individual able to produce more cheaply than the Government factories would be the object of prohibitive taxation. Also the problem of providing raw materials to the individual is a big one. The provision of tools must be combined with the development of factories. At present any Jewish worker in State factories must not only compete with non-Jews but he must also face anti-Semitism on the part of fellow-workers who force him back to the unemployed by ill treatment, physical and mental. The setting up of special factories for declassed Jews would have the enthusiastic co-operation of the Soviets and financial assistance has been promised. Permanent control of these factories would rest with the workers and the State representing them. The factories would stand or fall with the Government. The inauguration of such industrial relief would not mean the abandonment of agriculture. On the contrary, truck gardens, orchards, dairy farming and the like would be necessary as a source of livelihood during the hard transition period and as an adjunct to the industrial town.

The sufferings of Russian Jewry are due to a fundamental economic disintegration and maladjustment and relief work in Russia must be adapted to general conditions in the country before it can go to the root of the difficulty. The needs of European Jewry are essentially not of emergency character and therefore American Jewish relief is entering upon a third period of help which must deal with permanent economic reconstruction.

The next article of the Menorah Journal series to be condensed here will be "How Help Lithuanian Jewry?" by Zachariah Shuster, which appeared in the June issue of the magazine. L.L.A.

TORONTO STAR LAUDS RABBI

In a recent editorial, "The Departure of Rabbi Inserman," the Toronto Daily Star says:

The young rabbi who came to the Holy Blossom Synagogue in Toronto four years ago, Ferdinand Inserman, to become associated quickly with this city's social welfare activities, has accepted a call to the Temple Israel in St. Louis and will take up his duties there next September. His departure will occasion deep regret.

Rabbi Inserman became successor to Rabbi Brickner who had won the respect of the entire community. When that change took place it was felt that the new rabbi, then only 28 years of age, would have a difficult task to maintain the high standards established by his predecessor. But the culture and breadth of spirit he brought to bear in this field of labor enabled him to add prestige to the congregation to which he gave leadership.

An appeal Rabbi Inserman never tired making was in behalf of brotherliness which, too, was the keynote sounded by the founder of the Christian religion. The rabbi deprecated every assumption of racial or national superiority as something opposed to the unity, equality and brotherhood of humanity. He saw good in all the great religions and exalted the virtue of tolerance. He looked upon military preparations as a violation of professions of goodwill. He has a keen civic energy.

Any religious body would be pleased to have as one of its leaders a man with the graces of mind and heart that distinguish Rabbi Inserman. The esteem in which the still youthful rabbi is held by the leaders of other churches is evidenced by the fact that he has frequently been asked to preach at regular services of congregations of the United Church, the largest Protestant church in Canada. He preached in St. Paul's, Westmoreland, St. David's and Prospect Park United Churches, Toronto, during the last year, as well as in churches in Oshawa, Smith's Falls and Cornwall. He also has addressed numerous other church groups and the annual conference of the United Church in Regina. On June 18th he will preach a farewell sermon in Carlton Street United Church when tribute will be paid to his services as a member of this community.

There is other churches who listen with pleasure to the utterances of Rabbi Inserman do not, necessarily, endorse all his views. Something is wrong with a preacher or with his congregation whenever that can be truly said. It is indicative of the progress the world is making that people should welcome the expression of opinions differing from their own and make an effort to understand the other fellow's position. Untold misery would have been spared the world if men had always been as amiable and as eager for the truth

Freedman-Engel

Pauline Celia Engel, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Engel, of Oshawa, became the bride of Bernard A. Freedman, Sunday, June 23rd., at her home, 76 King St. W., Oshawa. Rabbi Samuel Sachs performed the ceremony on the garden lawn. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a period gown of white satin and tulle and her veil of white tulle in cap effect was caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of butterfly roses and lilies-of-the-valley and her ornament was a string of pearls, the gift of the groom. The bride's sister, Rose, who was her only attendant, wore a period gown of shell pink georgette with lace and carried a bouquet of Columbia roses. Her gift from the groom was a beaded bag. Lou Freedman, brother of the groom, was best man. The bride's mother wore a gown of printed chiffon with a corsage of red roses. Mrs. M. Freedman, mother of the groom, was in black lace with a corsage of yellow roses. Dinner was served to 150 guests and a reception was held in the evening. The music room was decorated with ferns and palms. The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. L. Chilow, Mr. and Mrs. S. Chilow, Mrs. S. Lowenberg and Miss Hilda Feinblatt, all of Chicago; and Mr. and Mrs. Pattenick, of Cobourg. The couple left on an extended motor trip to Rochester, New York, Atlantic City and Catskill Mountains. The bride travelled in an Oxford grey suit and silver fox fur, with white hat and shoes.

Stitt-Pasternak

The marriage of Bella, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pasternak, Palmerston Boulevard, to Dr. Myers L. Stitt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Stitt, of Fort William, took place Tuesday, June 18, at Pythian Castle Hall. Rabbi Samuel Sachs and Rabbi Weinraub performed the ceremony in the ball room, which was banked with palms, ferns and flowers. The bride was given in marriage by her father. Her period gown was of white georgette, with long train of white satin lined with shell pink. Her veil of silk net and lace was draped with a crown of pearls and orange blossoms and she carried roses and lily-of-the-valley in shower. Mrs. Mark Hands was her sister's matron of honour, gowned in green chiffon and rhinestones with shoes to match her gown. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. Lyla Hands, niece of the bride, was flower girl, in a frock of yellow georgette, with yellow tulle hair-bow, and carried a basket of rose petals. Dr. S. J. Hellen was best man. During the ceremony, Mrs. Leo A. Maldaver sang "Because," accompanied on the piano by Miss Yetta Gilbert. Mrs. Sidney Roth played the wedding march. A dinner and dance followed the ceremony. The bride and groom received with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pasternak and Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Stitt. The mother of the bride wore a black beaded gown, with corsage of roses and the mother of the groom, black lace with corsage of roses. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. H. Ellen and daughter, of Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. Harry Woolf, of Detroit; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Blumenthal, of Brampton, Ont.; Sam Kalafa, Mr. Watchel, Mrs. Racklin, of Hartford, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. F. Wolfson, of Winnipeg; Max Dear and I. Kalafa, of Newark, N.J.; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Langor and Dr. S. Rosen, of Hamilton, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Stitt, of Fort William.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming, and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

prophets adopted by Christian apostles? Are not the psalms, those songs of faith, sung alike by pious Jew and pious Christian? Was not even the Nazarene a Jew—his disciples Jews, Paul a Jew? Were not the Jews, like the Christians, fed to the lions to delight the Roman crowds? Were they not both compelled to conduct their worship in the catacombs along the Appian Way? But not only have the church and synagogue this mutual history, but are also mutually indebted—the church to the synagogue for its major inspiration which was Jewish; the synagogue to the church for the dissemination through its consecrated servants of the literature and idealism of Israel.

Not only are church and synagogue bound by these historic ties. They are also bound by the universal bonds of all religions—their faith in the existence of a God- their faith in the reality of spiritual values—their faith in a cosmic design—their faith in the worth whileness of life—their faith in the dignity of man. When in my theme I announced a discourse on the part the church and the synagogue were to play in the future of Canada, I was not thinking in terms of narrow denominationalism, but I was thinking in terms of the part that religion can play in the molding of the destiny of Canada.

And religion must play a role in Canada's destiny. It is as true today as it was years ago, that without vision a people perisheth. A religionless nation is a menace to civilization. A nation after all is a spiritual thing. Mountains do not make a nation, neither do rivers nor fields. These were in Canada long before there was a Canadian nation. Individuals constitute a nation—and just as individuals without spiritual significance are weeds among men, so is a nation without spiritual significance a weed among the nations. Just because Canada is a young country; just because her greatest achievements lie in the future; just because her ways are not yet rigid from age—nor her habits fixed—it is of the utmost importance that those who love her pause to see how she can attain her noblest destiny.

What part can the church and synagogue play in the future of Canada? First, the church and the synagogue, and all institutions of religion, can—aye, must help to develop a sound and healthy patriotism—a patriotism which, while it will mean a love for Canada, it will not mean an attitude of scorn or contempt for other peoples. Patriotism too frequently is distorted by hysterical chauvinists. A genuine love for one's country need not carry with it a hatred for all others. Religions which hold up the ideal of one God who rules the universe, recognize all men as His children. Religious leaders, therefore, must always insist that the patriotism which is inculcated into children is a patriotism which will not cause children to look with scorn upon other nations. To that end religious leaders should insist, that while the heroes of Canada be taught, that the heroes of other people receive consideration; that while the beauty of Canada's heroic struggle be related to young children, the beauty in the history of other peoples be likewise related. This will make for a patriotism which will rejoice in the achievements of other peoples. Ignorance of other people leads to suspicion, hatred and sows the seed for wars. The church and synagogue can stand united in teaching not merely the desirability of peace but its practicability as well. Canada is in a unique position to teach the world a great lesson in peace. On her southern border for more than a century not a sentinel has walked, not a fort has been erected, not a squad has drilled. On the east and west and north the vast oceans, those fortresses of God protect her. As Canada's distinguished woman member of Parliament has pointed out recently in Toronto, Canada can be the first nation of the world to disarm completely. What a bold dream! What if church and synagogue helped realize this dream! What a noble page they would help Canada write in the history of humanity—the first nation in the world to disarm—what spiritual aristocracy! How poets would exult over Canada, and troubadors for ages and ages shout her glory! This the teachers of religion can accomplish. Nor do I see how they can avoid the challenge. For War and God are incompatible. Religious leaders must be courageous and must speak out. Let the churches lead, the masses will follow. The churches must not be the echoes of the mobs. They must blaze the new trails. Thus church and synagogue, by cultivating the peace spirit, can give Canada a historic and envied place among the nations.

The next thing that church and synagogue must do is that they must eliminate religious bigotry. Bigotry is one of the cancers gnawing at the national life in Canada. It exists between Catholic and Protestant, between Jew and Christian. It has expressed itself through organization organized to maintain them. It has penetrated our political life. It perverts the ballot. It influences political appointments. It disrupts communities; sets provinces against each other; and makes uncomfortable, if not miserable, the lives of many of our citizens. Bigotry has entered the world of business and industry. I know whereof I speak when I say that in Toronto some of our leading industrial and commercial firms will not employ young Canadian men and women of several religious denominations because of their religious affiliations. We have known of young men and young women—not only Jewish—who have crossed the border because some Canadian employers were bigoted and made their religion a bar to their livelihood.

If religious teachers will not fight religious bigotry, who can be expected to combat it? If the church and the synagogue do not protest against the existence of hatred in the name of religion, who is to protest against it? The challenge to eliminate religious prejudice comes to religious leaders. If they ignore that challenge,then they are more loyal to their prejudices than to their God. If they remain silent, then they break their vows of ordination. A young country like Canada must be cleansed of the incipient scourge of religious hatred. Who but the institutions of religion, the churches and the synagogues, should effect that end. A nation torn by religious hatreds and dissensions cannot endure.

Not only can church and synagogue unite to promote the peace sentiment and to uproot religious bigotry in Canada, but they can also insist that the spirit of religious dominate the political life of the nation. I must not be misunderstood as saying that I favor clericalism of any form in the political field. There is nothing worse that sectarianism in politics. There is nothing worse than the exploitation of religious loyalties and prejudices for political purpose. There should be neither a Jewish, Catholic nor Protestant view in politics. There should be only one view, and that is the Canadian view. But by the spirit of religion in political life I mean the spirit of righteousness and justice. I mean that the desire to serve the state and not the desire to serve one's career should prevail in the political arena. I mean that men should cast their vote not according to traditional labels, but according to merit. I mean that legislators should vote not with an eye on their constituencies but with both eyes ~~on the ultimate welfare of Canada.~~ I mean that our parliamentarians should be ready to meet defeat at the polls as did Ramsay MacDonald for the sake of their ideals and convictions. Not opportunism, not the passion for office, but the desire to serve the higher interests of Canada should be the motif of the politician. And who but the leaders of religion should champion this attitude.

In the discussion of a problem, like that of immigration, for example, we have heard every point of view expressed but the religious and spiritual view. We have seen even religious leaders echo the slogans of narrow tribalism, as if the God whom they served loved but one nation and hated others, and as if the people of nations other than his own are the scum of the earth. I believe that Canada can elect for itself a great mission—if she can resist the raucous voices which now dominate the discussion on immigration. Here is a large empty country, one-fifth of whose arable land is cultivated, a very fragment of whose mineral wealth has been scratched—a country in whose prairies, fields and mines there lie treasured up great stores of human happiness and joy. There are in central and southeastern Europe countries which are overpopulated, whose children are anaemic, whose death-rate must even become higher, whose fields are all tilled, whose mines overdeveloped. The humble people of these countries, like you and me, also bear the image of God in them. They eye hungrily this vast country. Their muscles yearn to do its work; their backs are ready to bear its burden. They ask no especial favors, but the opportunity to toil here, that for their children and children's children they might wrest from the soil of Canada the happiness that God has stored up for man. We do not say that it is religious to open wide the gates of Canada, to the misfits and unfit. But I do say, if economic conditions permit, if men are physically, mentally and morally well, if they would find sustenance here for themselves and their families, I say that it is immoral and ungodly to bar them. After all, the resources of Canada, its mountains and its rivers, they are all God's gifts. Who reared Canada's beetling mountains? Who ploughed the courses for her rivers? Who filled her soil with wealth? Who stretched her between two mighty oceans? Who, but God! All of Canada's riches represent God's gift to man. Who dare deny the hungry and the poor a share in God's bounty? The irreligious may cruelly shut the door in face of the East-European, oblivious of his fleas. But the religious, those who love God and all His creatures, they must speak another language, and religious leaders must insist that the spiritual view be recognized in Canada's immigration policy.
